Fire Agencies Working Together to Reduce Wildland Fires

Salt Lake City – Utah’s wildland fire agencies have been working together to unify messages and prevention products to help reduce the number of wildland fires in the State. A statewide campaign is underway to develop and deliver these wildfire prevention messages and products. “These messages will help residents and visitors become more aware of the dangerous wildland fire conditions that exist this year. By being more knowledgeable of what causes wildfires, we will be able to enjoy our public lands in a safer manner,” said Loren Walker, U.S. Forest Service Prevention Coordinator.
